

MISSING MEN IN MOUNTAIN CAMP

Ballooning Who Went Up in the "America" Safe After Harrowing Experience.

FLIGHT WAS VERY SHORT

BUT PARTY LANDED IN SNOW-COVERED SIERRAS.

Los Angeles, March 23.—After one of the most harrowing experiences in the history of ballooning, Captain A. E. Mueller and his five companions who ascended in the big Ferris racing balloon "America" at Tournament park, Pasadena, at 3:30 last Saturday afternoon, and have since been lost in the wilds of the snow-covered Sierra Madre mountains, arrived on foot at Switzer's camp, on the slopes of Mount Wilson, footsore and weary, but unharmed. The men passed through a series of hardships, the details of which have not been learned. Arriving at Switzer's camp at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the men were shortly afterwards provided with horses and began the descent from there to Pasadena over a tortuous and slippery trail. A single telephone wire across the mountains brought the first word of their safe arrival at the camp to the anxious relatives and friends in Pasadena and to the thousands waiting for some tidings of the missing men. The telephone wire to the mountain camp shortly failed, and but little additional information regarding their hazardous trip was learned until the men reached Pasadena late at night.

Flight of Two Hours.

The balloon was in the air less than two hours. It was carried by the strong north wind over the high summit of Mount Lowe and swept on across the intervening peaks and canyons to the lofty summit of Mount Gabriel, where by the reckless casting away of ballast the balloon cleared and soared away towards Strawberry peak, on the third range. Crossing this at a low altitude, the bag encountered a strong current of cold air which brought it rapidly to earth. A successful landing was effected on the north side of Strawberry peak in what is known as Little Tejon canyon, about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, less than two hours after their ascension at Pasadena. The distance covered was less than fifteen miles in a direct line, but by any possible foot route many times that distance.

The voyagers, uncertain of their bearings, and with darkness rapidly approaching, wandered aimlessly over the mountains until 1:30 of the following afternoon (Sunday), when they unexpectedly came to Colby's ranch, an isolated habitation, far from any road and without communication with the outside world. In the meantime a terrific wind and snowstorm had broken over the mountains, which for many hours raged a veritable blizzard. During this time the men suffered from the cold, and the meagre supplies of provisions which they carried with them was sufficient to guarantee against hunger until their arrival at the ranch. At Colby's the party remained until 1:30 of Monday afternoon, when the storm ceased.

Finally Reached Switzer's.

They immediately took up the snow-choked trails across the mountains toward Pasadena. All of the remainder of the time the party traveled as best they could until this afternoon when they suddenly came upon Switzer's camp, nestled in the side of the mountain, still nearly ten miles from Pasadena by direct route. A party of rescuers on horseback were at Switzer's, having just returned after twenty hours of search for the missing men. For a few minutes there was a happy reunion of friends and then the news was flashed to Pasadena.

Not in years has an event created such a stir here as this thrilling episode of the balloonists. For three days searching parties have scoured the country in all directions, while relatives and friends waited almost without hope for news of a tragedy.

With Captain Mueller in the "America" were T. B. Gilliam, Richard Halsted, Sydney Gray, Harold Parker and Edward Dodschtz, all residents of Pasadena.

Captain Mueller summarized his remarkable experience as follows: "I saw the top of a barren peak, hardly large enough to hold the basket of the car. In the center of this peak was a pine tree, which had been burned. I pulled the valve cord and we shot downward. When we were within 500 feet of the mountain the men, following my instructions, threw over the ballast, and the balloon flew off, forming a parachute. We landed on the rock within ten feet of a sheer precipice.

"No one was injured in the slightest. The car was hardly jolted. I say, modestly, that it was the most remarkable landing of a balloon of which I have ever known."

Nerve and the Directoire

A prominent writer says: "You will need all your assurance the first time you walk out in your new gown." She means you will have to know you are absolutely fit, or you will not be able to wear it with satisfaction. If you are too fat this assurance will be lacking, for if the directoire reveals anything, it reveals fat. Consequently stout ladies are in duty bound, out of respect to their own peace of mind, to reduce—quickly—before the time is shown. Exercising and dieting being out of the question as too tiresomely long-winded and not desirable anyway as a sure means of reduction, the question arises, how shall any exact very slim ladies fit themselves to wear the new mode with the necessary assurance. The answer is Marmola—1/4 ounce, no more, no less, mixed with 1/2 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara and one can reduce any time as much or little as desired without fear of causing either wrinkles or stomach trouble. It provides the means whereby you can train down to the mode without interference to your diet or your habits.
